

Purpose:

We will plumb the depths of soul life to find a spiritual-scientific psychology that embraces the physical, soul and spirit life of being, and clearly marks the developmental milestones of children. This threefold educational psychology can be used to design and develop curriculum that will educate children within the parameters and milestones, and gradually awaken consciousness from one stage to the next.

This educational model will benefit educational innovators and parents, and grandparents as well, by giving them an understanding of the developmental requirements for each level from birth to age 21. Through an understanding of the development phases of children, teachers and parents will be able to support rather than divert this natural process so that the child will enter adulthood with a strong sense of purpose and with the capacity to fulfil their unique destiny.
